Advanced Mobility Device Securement Skills Workshop

Florida RTAP recently hosted the Advanced Mobility Device Securement Skills Development Workshop in Tampa. The train-the-trainer workshop provided classroom and on-vehicle instruction to agency representatives responsible for teaching securement techniques. Instruction included hands-on exercises utilizing a variety of mobility devices, an opportunity to address securement challenges, explore related issues with peers, and enhance their knowledge and skills.

Transit agencies have the responsibility to provide safe transportation and respect the civil rights of all passengers, including those who use mobility devices. In order to fulfill this responsibility, bus operators must be able to secure mobility devices and place seat belts on the passengers who use their mobility devices as transit seating.

This important task is becoming increasingly challenging as operators are confronted with a variety of powered mobility devices that often lack traditional securement points and may not have been addressed in basic securement training.

The workshop goal was to present, demonstrate, and practice problem-solving skills for securing powered mobility devices. Participants discussed federal requirements regarding securement and seat belt use, and pre-trip preparation tasks. They were instructed on how to identify mobility device securement equipment and determine effective strap securement locations on diverse types of mobility devices.

Participants learned about the use and placement of seat belts and shoulder belts, how to recognize proper body mechanics, and exercises which can reduce the risk of on-the-job injuries. To accomplish these objectives, the workshop integrated lecture, visual aids, participant discussion and learning activities.

This National Transit Institute course is sponsored by the Alan M. Voorhees Transportation Center and funded by a grant from the Federal Transit Administration.
